

ones not that involved. There are always so many different plotlines running and I loved being able to watch the other cast members in the courtroom gallery subtly playing out each of their current stories. Sometimes just down to who they were looking at, or not looking at, in the courtroom.

You returned a few months later when teacher Angus Henderson was on trial for his relationship with student Rachel Kinski. What was it like to be a part of filming those scenes?

Very much the same as before, everyone works to such a high standard that it makes each experience enjoyable and valuable.

Would you be willing to make a return to Neighbours if the opportunity ever arose? Absolutely. Would not pass up the chance.

What have you been up to since your Neighbours appearances?

I've had guest roles in both City Homicide and the first of the Underbelly movies, Tell Them Lucifer Was Here. I've worked on a five films and have been working extensively in Improvisation. I played the lead role in an exciting new format Improvisation show called McGuffin in the Melbourne Fringe Festival. The show was all made up on the spot based on the ideas the audience gave us, but each show had a loose plotline that we knew. Then each show for the 7 days continued the story from the previous day, like a television series. It was great fun and really had us playing and thinking on our feet!

Finally, after 26 years on air, what do you think is the reason behind Neighbours' enduring success?

It has many factors together, which can be summed up as: great characters, evolving and engaging storylines, and a feeling of coming home when you watch it.

Interview by Steve. Added on 7th May 2011

Back

About Us | Contact | Press Ctl + D to bookmark this page
 The Perfect Blend website is an unofficial site of the television programme Neighbours © Grundy Television Pty Ltd, distributed by FremantleMedia Limited.
 Grundy Television Pty Ltd, FremantleMedia Ltd, Five, the BBC and their associated companies are not responsible for the content of The Perfect Blend website and hereby disclaim any liability in relation to any content or services provided by The Perfect Blend