FRINGE FESTIVAL REVIEW

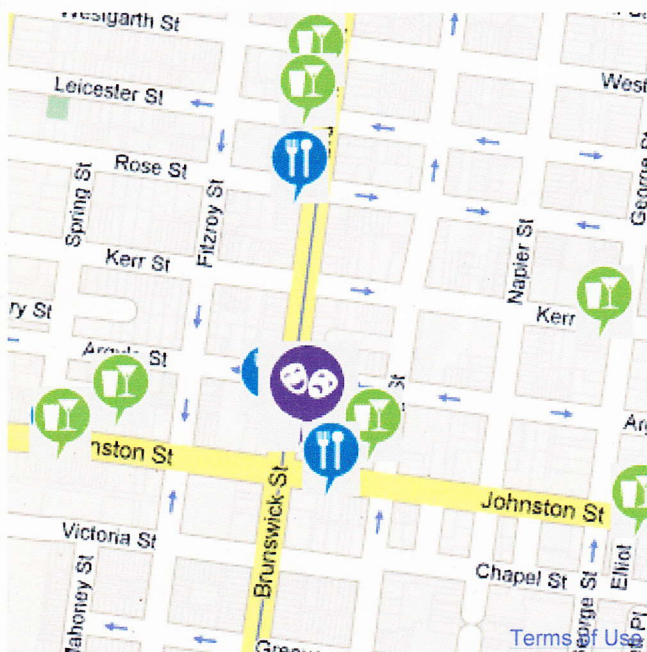

3 stars

Alex Broun, the director of the 10-minute play festival Short & Sweet, has another show at the Fringe. Pick Ups is a suite of comic vignettes about dating. Some of its sketches are cheap and cheesy, some exhibit more sophisticated wit, and others offer more nuanced excursions through the minefield of post-industrial courtship.

Director Jamie Unicomb sets a lightning pace. There are exuberant and sometimes well-observed performances, especially from Gina Morley and Cameron Box. Not all of the comic timing is up to scratch, but it's still a humorous and diverting show.

Pick Ups.
